In the opening ceremony of the event, the senior design head, Criselle Rodrigues, warmly welcomed the esteemed judges and participants on behalf of the IEEE council. This event contains a well-structured agenda with keynote speeches, panel discussions, and networking sessions to maximize engagement.

Participants asked numerous questions to the founder and investors, allowing them to clarify their doubts. The questions were as “What challenges did you face when starting your venture, and how did you overcome them?” Many shared that initial financial constraints and market uncertainty were significant hurdles, but they emphasized the importance of building a strong network and seeking mentorship from experienced peers. Another insightful question was, “What qualities do you look for in start-ups before investing?” The consensus was that they prioritize a passionate, adaptable team with a clear vision and a scalable business model, alongside a solid understanding of their target market. We also asked, “How has your background influenced your investment strategy?” Responses varied, but many noted that their experiences as founders have made them more empathetic investors, helping them identify not just financial potential but also the commitment and grit behind a startup. When we inquired, “What advice would you give to aspiring entrepreneurs?” their responses highlighted the value of resilience, continuous learning, and the necessity of being open to feedback and pivoting when needed. Additionally, several stressed the importance of building a diverse team and fostering an inclusive culture. These insights not only reflect their personal experiences but also serve as invaluable guidance for the next generation of innovators, offering a roadmap for navigating the complexities of entrepreneurship and investment in today’s dynamic landscape.
